

Abstract

A process and apparatus for drying a stack of lumber, wherein the dry comprises a condensation collection device for collecting liquid in the chamber interior space; and an evaporation system for evaporating collected liquid from the chamber interior space.

- 5 Process water or effluent discharge from the drying process is reduced or eliminated.